LIVINGSTON

Livingston Circle is one of the most prominent and busiest commercial intersections in Essex County, serving as a key convergence point for Eisenhower Parkway, Route 10, and Mount Pleasant Avenue. The area offers exceptional accessibility and visibility, with traffic counts exceeding 39,000 vehicles per day, making it a prime location for retail, office, and service-oriented businesses.

Surrounded by affluent residential communities and a strong mix of national and regional tenants, the location draws consistent consumer traffic from Livingston, West Orange, Roseland, and the broader Morris/Essex County markets.

Livingston itself is one of northern New Jersey's most desirable suburban communities, known for its high household incomes, strong school system, and proximity to major employment hubs, further supporting long-term demand for well-located commercial assets.
